Support

Explanation:

The State Bar of Michigan Animal Law Section supports HB 4035, which would prohibit local units of government from enacting rules pertaining to dogs based on "breed or perceived breed."

The bill strikes a balance by expressly allowing local units of government to enact rules that "place[] restrictions or impose[] additional requirements on dogs or dog owners." However, by requiring that any restrictions or requirements be breed neutral, this bill ensures fairness and does not allow local government to interfere with residents' ownership interests in specific breeds or types of dogs based on prejudice. Breed-specific legislation should be prohibited because it has been shown to be ineffective in achieving local governments' stated goal of protecting the public, it is expensive and difficult to enforce, and it results in dogs that are not problematic being euthanized or rehomed and separated from their human families.

Breed-specific legislation provides a false sense of security to a community, which should focus its efforts on responsible pet ownership, including enacting and enforcing rules regarding licensure, vaccination, anti-tethering, leashes, etc. and providing training to adults and children regarding pet selection, safe dog interactions, and humane ownership (including encouraging spay neuter, bite prevention, proper pet care, etc.). Responsible and humane dog ownership has a demonstrated connection to safer communities.
