Please also demonstrate that the item does not violate Article IV, S 30 of the Michigan Constitution. Renaissance of Hope is a community development corporation serving residents in Detroit with a vision to actively engage in non-profit residential and community real estate and educational programs for low- and moderate-income individuals. Renaissance of Hope's Resource Hub project will reimagine a vacant school building, transforming the 90,000 square foot building into a world-class community hub, providing a commercial kitchen, on-site childcare, human & family services, workforce development training programs, and a youth innovation lab.

The neighborhood surrounding The Resource Hub is located in Detroit's District 8, a part of the 48204-zip code, where 41% of residents live below the federal poverty level. The neighborhood primarily consists of Black residents (96%) and the median income is only $21,000. The COVID pandemic caused and exacerbated harm in several areas including financial hardship, unemployment, food insecurity, health, and the lack of childcare services.

The Resource Hub proposal will activate a currently vacant building and have a catalytic, long-term impact not only on community residents living near the intersection of Livernois and Grand River, but also Detroiters throughout the region. First, what supports this statement and claim of impact is the internal and external data gathered that demonstrates the vast economic and social harm caused by the pandemic on Black Detroiters, especially those living near the proposed Resource Hub. Second, The Resource Hub project has been planned and designed in collaboration with community residents and stakeholders after Renaissance of Hope completed a community needs assessment, where residents outlined the most important needs for their family and community during the pandemic. Third, The Resource Hub project is a part of a larger neighborhood master planning effort, led by Renaissance of Hope, that includes planned improvements to housing, open lots, and additional vacant spaces surrounding The Resource Hub. To grow a tax base and population, residents need to know they're safe, they need to know that there are readily available services and amenities catered to their families, and that they have access to jobs and upward mobility. The Resource Hub will partner with exceptional partners and agencies to ensure that Detroit families can lift themselves out of poverty given the proper opportunities and resources. Finally, the services provided to neighborhood businesses and nonprofits will help neighborhood businesses grow in revenue and knowledge and have more access to capital.
