VICTIMS OF CRIME ACT (VOCA)

- The Crime Victims Fund is not funded by taxes, rather it is financed through various federal penalties, fines, and forfeitures collected from convicted federal offenders, primarily white-collar crime.
 - The funds in the Crime Victims Fund are then allocated to individual states based on a formula. Each state receives a portion of the fund based on factors such as population and crime rates.
 - Grants are awarded to local victim service programs, nonprofit organizations, and government agencies. These grants support a wide range of services for crime victims, including counseling, legal assistance, emergency shelter, and more.
